

TURKEY CAN'T RESUME WAR

Army Wants to Fight, but Government Is Without Funds.

IN HANDS OF POWERS

Kiamil Pasha, Head of Cabinet, Declares for Peace.

WILL REPLY WEDNESDAY

Porte Considering Powers' Demands, but Has Not Announced Decision.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun

Constantinople, Jan. 19.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Daily Chronicle has interviewed with Grand Vizier Kiamil Pasha on the reply of Turkey to the demands of the Powers which he has just received. He has been decided upon, and probably will be delivered on Wednesday. The Grand Vizier says: "I am for peace, but it will be necessary to ascertain the will of the powers before making a reply to the Powers. The army is a unit in insisting on peace. Money is the great need. There is no foreign financial aid until the internal loan is renewed. It is necessary to renew hostilities. No orders have been given to the Turkish army to the London peace conference to come home. The question of peace has now passed from the hands of the allies into the hands of the Powers."

Kiamil Pasha referred briefly to the peace conference. He had no details, but at the same time his face beamed with light.

A special correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, who has lately returned from the Near East, claims to have authority for stating that the situation at Constantinople has undergone a change. The officials and the public are becoming aware of the fact that one-half of Nazim Pasha's big army of very inferior quality, the severe weather has caused havoc with the poorer class of soldiers. The men are wretchedly dressed and the situation which to a certain point was valuable is now damaging their efficiency. Nazim Pasha and other members of the staff have realized these facts to the Cabinet and have had a marked effect.

The members of the Cabinet, with two exceptions, are absolutely convinced that it will be impossible for Turkey to resume the war with the slightest prospect of success. Noradunhan Effendi, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, is an important exception. He is strongly in favor of a renewal of the war and was doubtless responsible for the publication of yesterday's forecast of a reply of the Porte to the powers. It had been considered as the Cabinet.

Noradunhan has personal reasons to his attitude. He is an Armenian and is trying to protect himself from the time when supporters will be demanded.

CABINET HOLDS SESSION.

Reply to Powers' Note Considered; No Decision Announced.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
Constantinople, Jan. 19.—The Cabinet held several sessions yesterday and today and discussed the reply which would be made to the note of the Powers suggesting that the Porte should yield to the demands of the allies for the cessation of hostilities and the Greek islands. It is not known whether the Cabinet issued the draft of the reply drawn up by Noradunhan Effendi, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, or took some other action.

THREE HOURS NAVAL BATTLE.

Greeks and Turks Exchanged Many Shots With Few Hits.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
January 19.—The Dardanelles correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says the naval battle between the Greek and Turkish fleets lasted three hours. The Georgios Averoff was the first Greek vessel to appear from behind Tenedos, where it had been hidden. It was attacked by the Turkish vessels Hareddin, Tourguteis, Mossudieh and Selimie which steamed in single file behind the smaller vessels following. The Georgios Averoff passed before them in an effort to outflank the Turkish fleet, but was kept off by the terrific fire of the Hareddin and Tourguteis.

The Georgios Averoff then tackled the Hareddin alone, the shells falling all around both. There were seven more Greek vessels behind the Georgios Averoff, but they did not fire. The Turkish vessels slowly retreated toward Sedibah, still firing, but the Georgios Averoff escaped and rejoined the Greek fleet. More than eight hundred shells were exchanged, but there were few hits.

The Turkish vessels appear to be in danger although it is admitted at Constantinople that the losses on both sides are severe and that a number of wounded are being brought to the Turkish hospital.

There is an unconfirmed report that there was another engagement between the fleets yesterday.

SERBIA WANTS HER SHARE.

Desires Compensation for the Bulgarians' Adriatic.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
London, Jan. 20.—M. Mijatovich, the Serbian statesman who was the plenipotentiary of that country in settling peace with Bulgaria in 1886, writes to the Daily Telegraph that it is neither in the interest of Serbia nor Greece nor Bulgaria should get Adriatic without qualification. He says: "Once in Adriatic the Bulgarians

A WAITING GAME

No projector of a building enterprise should be expected to play a waiting game as to cost, quality, and time required for completion.

And any Owner who submits to such a condition on his building operation is negligent of his own best interests. A building operation with us is not a game at all, but a very serious business, and the cost, the quality, and the completion date are a matter of guarantee at the start, and not a speculation for the future.

will soon find that there exists a force which the Russians call the historical providence and which will irresistibly move them to go forward until they reach the Golden Horn. This historical providence is really a logical consequence of material facts, situations and influences. But long before the Bulgarians will be able to exercise great political influence at Constantinople. It is not impossible that Bulgaria from Adriatic could impose on Turkey a secret military convention which eventually may be turned either against Serbia or Greece or both.

"With Adriatic, in addition to nearly the whole of Macedonia, the Bulgarians will be the first and mightiest of the Balkan States."

M. Mijatovich, while asserting that Greece and Serbia should continue to support in a chivalrous manner the Bulgarian demand for Adriatic, urges that the latter country ought to give Greece and Serbia voluntarily adequate compensation for the great Turkish city in Europe in order to insure the balance of power in the Balkans. Otherwise, he says, the hegemony of Bulgaria will lead to fresh distrust and jealousy among the Balkan nations and may perhaps open the gates again to a foreign conqueror. He continues:

"The Adriatic question is at this moment menacing the peace in the Balkans and indirectly the peace of Europe. The allies, especially the Bulgarians, ought in good time take care to prevent that after the conclusion of peace Adriatic possessed by these great friendships cemented on glorious battlefields, which are yet in danger of being wrecked by their one-sided exploitation."

TURKISH WARSHIP ESCAPES.

Cruiser Reaches Port Said Undamaged by Greek Shells.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
Port Said, Jan. 19.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh has arrived here after having been in a running fight with two small Greek cruisers. Her only damage was the loss of one anchor. Another one was damaged.

She is now coaling and getting provisions aboard.

ITALY'S KING, UNDER GUARD, ON PARADE

50,000 Soldiers and 5,000 Detectives Protect Him Against Assassins.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
Rome, Jan. 19.—For the first time since the assassination of King Humbert in 1900 Italy's King appeared in public today at the head of troops. The memory of Victor Emmanuel's father's assassination at Monza and the possible danger of its repetition forced the Government to adopt extraordinary measures for the safety of the King's person today.

Fifty thousand troops lined the course of march, standing four deep throughout. Behind them wooden barriers had been erected and the intervening space was patrolled by 5,000 detectives. Great numbers of other troops were held in reserve should any emergency arise. Despite these drastic measures which might have provoked ill feeling among the spectators, the reception which the crowds gave the King was very enthusiastic. There was a great display of patriotic enthusiasm. Great crowds assembled behind the barriers and thousands of others filled the windows along the route, showering flowers on the marchers.

The military display was in honor of the Italian soldiers who served in the war in Tripoli and who returned here today. Five thousand of these veterans, led by forty bands, marched through the city to the Victor Emmanuel monument. There the regimental colors were placed and medals of valor were bestowed.

The ceremonies at the monument brought forth great enthusiasm. Forty banners were dipped in salute to the King. In his address he recalled the triumphs of ancient Rome. Queen Elena, the Dowager Queen Margherita, and all the princes attended.

The weather was perfect throughout the day and nothing occurred to mar the success of the occasion.

AERO INVADES BULLS' PARADISE.

They Snort, So Does Motor, and Aviator Escapes.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
MARSEILLES, Jan. 19.—The French aviator Reyband today had a sensation never rivalled even by a bull fighter. He was flying a monoplane and came down in the middle of the plains of La Camargue, the happy roving ground of bulls. When the animals saw the aeroplane they snorted and headed for the machine. Reyband had the presence of mind to restart his motor at once and go up in the air before the bulls reached him. Later on he made a landing at a safer place.

CHARING CROSS LAND SOLD.

ROOSEVELT'S GRIP ON PARTY WANING

Republicans Hope to Reorganize With Progressive Leaders Like Borah.

OLD GUARD TO THE REAR

Reports From the West Say T. R. Movement Has Died Out Practically.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—In the discussion that has been going on quietly here in regard to the reorganization of the Republican party Senator William E. Borah of Idaho has been mentioned frequently as the man about whom the scattered Republican forces can be rallied. Many Republicans predict that Senator Borah will be one of the most prominent candidates for the Republican nomination in 1916.

Senator Borah is soon to deliver a dozen speeches in the South of a local character. He will deliver a speech on Lincoln's Birthday before the Union League Club of Baltimore and will express some views on "the reorganization of the Republican party" that undoubtedly will attract the attention of the entire country. Mr. Borah will follow up his address with his speaking tour in the South. He is a Republican of pronounced progressive tendencies, but refused to follow Roosevelt in the last campaign.

Although little has been said recently of the movement to reform the Republican party along progressive lines, it has been making a rapid advance under the surface and in the opinion of party leaders here soon will assume such proportions as to make it certain that the third party movement engineered by Col. Roosevelt is doomed to fail.

The new movement contemplates the temporary elimination of the old regular leaders and the putting forward of men of well known progressive views. In the Senate Borah of Idaho, La Follette of Wisconsin, Brewster of Kansas and Cummins of Iowa will figure prominently in the next session in connection with the tariff and trust legislation. Little will be heard from men who have before been identified with the regular Republican organization in the Senate.

Scarcely a day passes now but that the Republican Senators get together in the cloak room or elsewhere and compare notes on reports received from their respective States as to the progress of the reorganization plan. Everything they have learned up to this time has been very encouraging. This is particularly true of the States west of the Mississippi. The Roosevelt movement in the Western States has practically died out. The information that has been received from Pennsylvania is very encouraging to the Republicans. Senator Worcester has been hearing good reports from California, while Senators Cummins and Kenyon of Iowa report that the third party movement is practically eliminated in their State.

Senator La Follette of Wisconsin is in the new movement. He avows himself a Republican and he undoubtedly will play an important part in the Republican leadership in the Senate.

One prominent Republican Senator said today that he expected after March 4 the third party following in the Senate would be limited to a single Senator. Polindexter of Washington, Brewster of Kansas has been heard of as a reorganization element in the Republican party and Senator Clapp of Minnesota is expected to come in very shortly. Senator Dixon of Montana, chairman of the third party movement, was defeated for reelection and will go out of the Senate on March 4.

The information which the Republican leaders are receiving from the States indicates there is a disposition among prominent Republicans to get back into the party organization. The third party movement has made little progress since the election. Reports indicate that a large percentage of those who voted for Roosevelt did so as a matter of protest and in many cases the protest was against local conditions.

"PARSIFAL" ROW CONTINUES.

Prohibited Monte Carlo Performance Was to Be for Charity.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
MONTÉ CARLO, Jan. 19.—The row over the proposed production of "Parsifal" without the consent of the Wagner family continues. It appears that Herr Gumbourg based his claim on the right to play "Parsifal" on a clause in the Berne convention which allows protected works to be played for charity. He intended to devote the profits of the performance to those wounded in the Balkan war.

The Society of Authors, at the instigation of the Wagner family, began proceedings here to prevent the production, but the president of the society, Pierre de Courcelle, first approached the Prince of Monaco, who after studying the case vetoed the performance.

15 ON VERONESE DROWNED.

Eleven Passengers Lost in Being Brought Ashore.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun
LONDON, Jan. 19.—Despatches from Oporto to-night in regard to the wreck of the steamship Veronese say that five English and six Spanish sailors were drowned during the work of bringing them ashore. Four of the crew also were lost. All the bodies have been recovered. All the holds of the Veronese are full of water, the bottom has been ripped up and the rudder is gone. The ship carried 12 passengers and a crew of 60.

Some despatches say 41 were lost.

JAMES'S SPIRIT WARNS HYSLOP

writing the spirit was asked what further demonstration he or she would give that night. The reply of the spirit was a laconic "Good night!"

At about that time, during a crystal gazing seance, spirits made a little fun of Dr. Hyslop.

"The automatic writing," Dr. Hyslop records, "showed the following sentence in reference to myself: 'He has two pairs of pajamas and one black tie and no heat clothes.' In the record of the crystal gazing in which he saw vision of all sorts, I was again mentioned, and the message took the form of an inter-location referring to me apparently."

"Some puns were committed and then the message 'They laugh. It is dark.' And then the second spirit said: 'No, wrong. Give him two pairs of pink pajamas.' The first spirit then remarked: 'The pink of perfection. What shall I give him for Christmas?' The second replied: 'Morning mourning black tie, when the first replied: 'You are not serious enough for me.'"

"Some years ago," Dr. Hyslop continues in attempting to explain this levity on the part of the spirits, "a reference was made through Mrs. Chenoweth to Prof. James, while he was in England with his lectures, and about the same time Dr. Hodgson purposed to communicate through Miss Gauda (Mrs. Rathbun) and said: 'Tell James he looks cute in pink pajamas.'"

"In communication with him at that time I received a letter that he was wearing pink pajamas at that time. I have a black tie of his which I have used as an article in my experiments with Mrs. Chenoweth. It was not possible for the boy to know about the necktie of the pink pajama incident."

On December 19, 1911, Prof. James communicated, says Dr. Hyslop, through the boy medium, who was gazing into a crystal. It was then that he warned Dr. Hyslop against the poltergeist or "kicked spirit." Part of the dialogue between Prof. James and Hyslop as carried on through the entranced boy was as follows:

Here is Prof. James. Good evening, Hyslop.

Good evening. Do you recognize the papers?

Yes.

I just saw a few words unintelligible. Would you like to see Hodgson?

Yes.

A man with not much hair, blue eyes, long face, sober looking, looks like a thinker.

A beard?

I can't see now. He has turned his head. It is dark.

At this point Dr. Hyslop asked Prof. James to give a distinct proof of his identity, James replied:

"I took you to paradise and you (pause). Hang it all, I took you to lots of places. I took you once into my study and we agreed on a sign. You remember?"

Hyslop didn't remember, and the spirit of James, apparently vexed, called excitedly, "Hyslop, Hyslop! Your undivided attention, undivided. Hands off the table!" The spirit continued rapidly:

"Better summon friends to make an agreement and not follow my example looking up my paper on which all hangs. Now that I am dead I cannot describe it. Wait till I can find it. If you find the paper on top you will find it bearing my sign, at the bottom a coat of arms of the Duke of Fairfax, with two swords crossed above a helmet, and an arm holding a paper with my sign, picture to the left, myself, wife to the right, mother in the middle. Ready?"

At the time of the death of Prof. James there was a story current to the effect that he had left with some member of his family or some friend a sealed message. The report went that Prof. James told the one with whom he had left this message that after his death he would report the message from the spirit land. When the envelope was opened and was found to contain the same message as was sent by the dead professor it would forever establish the proof of the spiritualists' claims.

Hereward Carrington, a spiritualist of this city, said last night that he had heard this story and had talked it over with Prof. Hyslop. Both Prof. Hyslop and Mr. Carrington agreed that they had never found any of Prof. James' friends or relatives who had heard of such a message and they did not believe that there was any truth in the story.

Then came the warning about the poltergeist:

"The left of that I find another picture taken at night by a flashlight, a clever idea of mine, when it is flashed about an instrument attached to the table of mine. The picture is of one who calls himself the nameless one, horrible. Don't look at it too long, but only in short spells. You will see why it is horrible. Is it too fast?"

"No," replied Hyslop.

"Ready? The earthly person's writing caused me all the trouble. It saps my forces, keeps me away from objects. Polish that paper, but don't give the answer. Cross it out."

Then came the most curious part of the whole performance. Prof. James, having promised the boy's family to protect them against the poltergeist, informed the medium where dangerous objects were hidden in the house. A search was made and a broken ink bottle, numerous razors, about 100 matches placed on top of a closet door, so that there was danger of their lighting, and other objects were found.

The boy medium conveyed at the same time other messages from Prof. James. One was:

"Dear Hyslop—Write a paper against woman suffrage. It is my desire that you do this your W. W. S. and R. W. S."

"P. S. Don't let your wife see it."

In January, 1912, Prof. James, Hyslop says in his report, was again vexed by the difficulties of communication. The spirit burst out with:

"You poor chump. You would be a part unintelligible by his appearance. Do not try to seem outwardly cool, but say what you mean, Hyslop!"

Throughout the various seances the spirit of Prof. James caused the boy to write or express a secret sign, the Greek letter Omega, that had been arranged between James and Hyslop, and the spirit made other allusions which, says Dr. Hyslop, could not possibly have been made to the boy medium.

The Psychological Research Society calls attention to the acceptance by Harvard University of the Hodgson memorial fund, and says that by the acceptance Harvard has committed itself to the policy of furthering the practical side of psychical research.

Saks & Company

Broadway at 34th Street

continuing today and tomorrow the semi-annual sale of Men's Overcoats

¶ The great advantage of a Saks sale over an average sale is, that our assortments are representative and ample, despite the greater volume of our business. This is because our assortments are kept at the high-water mark right up to the eleventh hour. This sale of overcoats embraces a full line of garments at the prices stated. It is not a sale of broken assortments, though at the rate of the present response it soon will be.

¶ Regulation coats, greatcoats, evening frock overcoats, and other styles, in a variety of models, fabrics and colorings. And every coat Saks-made, which means the finest tailoring and finish in the world. But remember, the assortments will not last forever.

A great offering of neckwear
18,300 Men's Scarfs
values 55c and 1.00
today 28c

this is the most glorious collection of scarfs ever brought together

¶ Candidly, this sale is just great, any way you care to look at it. There never before was anything quite like it, never. You see, it is our privilege every January to enter the premises of two prominent neckwear makers and buy up the remainder of their neckwear yardage at a purely nominal figure. We have just taken advantage of this privilege and cleaned up these two great wholesale stocks from stem to stern, which the makers have made into hospitable four-in-hands.

¶ Now the proposition is this: We extend to you the same privilege extended to us, with the additional privilege of buying as many scarfs as you choose, or as few. We invite you to go through these 18,300 fine scarfs and appropriate whatever looks good to you—at the uniform price of twenty-eight cents apiece.

¶ The assortment is wonderful. It is a maze of designs and a blaze of color. Practically every kind of material ever employed in a scarf is included in this remarkable assemblage of four-in-hands. There are sarafs, armures, repps, brocades, satins, poplins, Persians, clubs, stripes on the level and stripes on the bias, silk knitted scarfs and snappy, swaggy regimentals, in scores of shades and combination colorings, and in countless patterns. Scarfs that are quiet and contemplative, scarfs that are just so-so, scarfs that are radical, scarfs for the decorous, the dandiacal, and the dilettante. A range of choice which covers the current history of scarf styles, and a price which creates history in scarf values.

Extraordinary Offering of 13,218 pairs

Men's Silk Hose 18c regularly 39c

only way you can go wrong on this silk hose is to fail to buy it

¶ For a really inexpensive silk hose, this is about the best thing we have ever done, and when you can buy silk hose of this superior quality at eighteen cents per pair, we respectfully submit that you are getting about the biggest value you can ever expect to get. It is true, the maker of this hose considers some of it imperfect, but it is also true that if these infinitesimal imperfections amounted to anything not a single pair of this silk hose could get into the Saks Store.

¶ This hose is made of all pure silk. At eighteen cents, mind you. Every pair has double lisle heels and toes and double silk soles. At eighteen cents, remember. The selection embraces black, tan, navy, gray, Burgundy, purple and lavender. At eighteen cents, don't forget that. Incidentally, the assortment includes 5,470 pairs of all black heavy silk-plated hose, made of lisle within and silk without, and spliced heels and toes, being the most serviceable silk hose ever made. And only eighteen cents per pair at that. Where, when and how can you do better in silk hose at eighteen cents? Where, when and how can you do as well—but at Saks' today.
